

2004 Eternal Workshopping, Aalborg, Denmark

The workshop for urban design students used the site of the old Eternit Factory in Aalborg for a learning process with and about workshops or idea generation in general. The students worked with their own ideas in an intensive brainstorm type workshop. This included a XY room with a body exploration (move like your favourite animal) to speed up the creative process.

They would present and publish their projects in the local press. Then the students would participate in a public workshop that discussed the same site and use this for comparing the two workshop methods.

