

2007 Local Interaction Camp, Hedehusene, Denmark

To start off the urban regeneration project for the social housing, Charlottetkvarteret, Supertanker organised a Local Interaction Camp where artists, architects and urbanists from Europe participated. The goal was to design a base for the project that would signal and be a part of an open ended and dynamic process.

The foundation for this was a workshop with youth in the local youth club that for example suggested making a local market. Through an intense 48 hours with presentations and idea generation we came up with the idea of a mobile unit that could be moved around the neighbourhood and facilitate a range of activities.
